CURIOSITY

The Italian Riesling vine is a different variety than the Rhine Riesling. The Italic Riesling seems to arrive in Oltrepò Pavese only after the dramatic period of the phylloxera, when it was necessary to re-plant much of the vineyards destroyed by the small insect imported from America.

The wine produced with Italian Riesling does not have the aromas, the structure and the longevity of Rhine Riesling: it is in fact an apparently easier wine, with delicate fruity fragrances, but equally pleasant, fragrant and fresh.
